New YORK, Nov. 14.—Cleveland's vote in the electoral college is, according to the latest returns 271, without California and Ohio, which are claimed by both parties. If he gets those states the vote would stand Cleveland, 303; Harrison, 118; Weaver, 23. This is based upon reports that Colorado, Idaho, Kansas Nevada and North Dakota are for Weaver, and that Michigan gives for Weaver, and that Michigan gives the colorado of th Harrison eight and Cleveland six votes. Nebraska and South Dakota are Republican, and the Republicans appear to ave one of Ohio'stwenty-three electors.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 11.—Indiana is Democratic. Drift is to Cleveland and joined the procession, and is Democratic in all its branches. Returns are now sufficently complete to give fairly reliable estimates on all the ninety-two counties of the state. They show that Cleveland has carried it by at least 7,000 and the entire Democratic state ticket is elected by pluralities in the same neghborhood. The Populists and Prohibition parties did not come anywhere near their expectations.

Eleven Democrats and two Republicans are elected to congress as follows: First district, A. H. Taylor, Democrat; Second, John L. Bretz, Democrat; Third, Jason E. Brown, Democrat; Fifth, George W. We cannot see, however, why the ball bearing may not be indiciously applied to light vehicles and so lighten the draft."

Another, while commending pneumatic tires for sulkies, thinks something else must be got up for road busine and suggests as a suitable tire iron outside with rubber under it; the iron to stand the wear of rough roads and the rubber to give elasticity.

Still another company thinks pneu matic tires on suikies are not a success on a heavy or muddy track, and that they cannot take the place of the present wheels, because, first, their height is against them for carriages, and were they made higher their strength would be very much impaired; second, in much dy roads they certainly would be use less. FARM LABOR.

Wages Prevailing During the Period Be tween 1800 and 1802. A miscellaneous report of the department of agriculture formishes interesting has at notes and tabulated data on investigution like hads at. tions of wages at nine different time to a normal status, which has been maintained with wonderful uniformity during the last ten years. While farmers have suffered from low prices of certain products they have been unable to reduce the rate of wages. It might be supposed that the depression in agriculture, of which so much has been said and written, would be attended with a decline in the rate of compensation paid for labor. This has not taken place. The demand is well sustained and wages 5 have not declined. Many a farmer complains that labor costs too much; that values of products do not warrant the rates demanded, and yet he must have

it, and promptly makes the engagement.

The returns give a true explanation of the apparent anomaly of low prices and the apparent anom high wages. There is a difference in employers. Some are progressive, increase the fertility of their lands, use the best the fertility of their lands, use the fertility of the fertility pay good wages and make money. Others are less enterprising, diligent or progressare less enterprising, diagent or progressive, and make small profit or none at all. The returns are full of indications that the present is a crucial test of the individual farmers. They teach the necessity of progress in agriculture, and cessity of progress in agriculture, and

BALED HAY.

Views of a Californian with a Half Century's Experience on the Subject. A correspondent of The Country Geneman who has had fifty years' experince in various modes of making hay dvocates baling it as both economical and convenient. He considers that there et high, as done with machine pitchrs, horses, hoisting forks, rakes, cariers and pulleys, and also with hay

I am of the opinion that four to: icks, the hay drawn around them rith a horse rake and the stacks proected with waterproof caps, form an conomical method of stacking hay for ding, as one man can make a three or ar ton stack while a boy draws the se hay to it with a horse rake, leav ag it on any side convenient for pitch g on the stack. If the weather is reatening, a small stack can be made an hour or two without wagons or ttle damp it will sweat in the small tacks without material damage and get endy for baling.

Dy stacking in small stacks with fev men and little machinery except hors rakes much drawing and time ar saved-as experience taught me long ago-and the baling machine can be moved from one small stack to another while a single load of hay could be drawn and pitched on a large stack. Again, if rain threatens, a small stack can be quickly made or rounded up and secured with a material stack. secured with a waterproof cap without damage. Hay can probably be secured in the field as suggested at less than half the cost of putting in large stacks with costly machinery, and the barns or hay lofts will contain three or four times as much hay in bales as could be out it to them loose, making saving in tors or space as well as drawing twice as much at a load in bales without any hay racks. Again, the convenience of bales for feeding is worth considering. The hay s taken from the end of the bale with he hands, when the baling wire is cut. in a layer only a few inches thick, the Lay left in the bale remaining close as he press left it, and so on till the bale is all used, the wires being easily cut.

Use from the bale a few pounds at a time; the hay retains its fresh color and quality far better than when loose Furthermore, if other work is pressing the hay can remain in small stacks till light frosts occur, when the baling can be dene without hindering plowing or any other urgent work. Waterproof caps for small stacks or cocks can be obtained at little cost or made on the Husking Corn.

Husking corn ought to begin as soon as it will do to crib in a well slatted crib. Take as many sacks as will make a load when filled and husk in a bushel basket. Husk nine shocks, and make two bundles of fodder of each shock, advises a farmer who writes as follows in The New England Homestead:

Use the old band to tie one bundle and make the other one with two stalks. When you have your sacks full get your wagon, leave off the box, cover the bottom with boards, and you can load with out lifting over the box. The crib should have two doors, each half way from center to end, and at a height to be conveniently reached from the cessity of progress in agriculture, and especially a facility for prompt adaptation of current effort to changing conditions.

In the City of Mexico a work of organized time you can unload in short order. Astion of current effort to changing conditions. the data collected concerning farm wages from 1840 to 1865, in comparison with results of the more recent investigations, will show that in fifty years the compensation of farm labor has measured and showledge to the first labor has measured and showledge to allow the blarney stone to be seen in North Carolina.

Raleigh ecclebrated its centeanial by me small corn in heaps to be gathered and cribbed separately. When the crib is full to the doors load the corn loose in the wagon box and shovel out with a second market. scoop. Marketing the corn depends on locality. Here in northeastern Ohio we think it more profitable to sell it at 30 cents per bushel basket of ears than to feed it for pork or beef at present prices.

If near city market two-thirds corn and one-third oats ground and fed to milk cows for butter or milk would be very profitable. Some farmers ensile their corn, but my experience is that dry fod-der, with root crops, is less expensive and gives equally good results.
